

Does this break your heart, like it does ours?

Emily was born into a Christian family 23 years ago. She grew up going to Sunday School, Vacation Bible School, youth group, short term missions, and possibly was home schooled or attended Christian private school. She entered college at 18 professing to be a Christian. As she leaves college and enters the world as an educated professional, she now tells others she doesn't think she is a Christian anymore.

James graduated from college 10 years ago and began his career believing Jesus for his salvation. He may have even become a Christian in college through the influence of campus ministries.

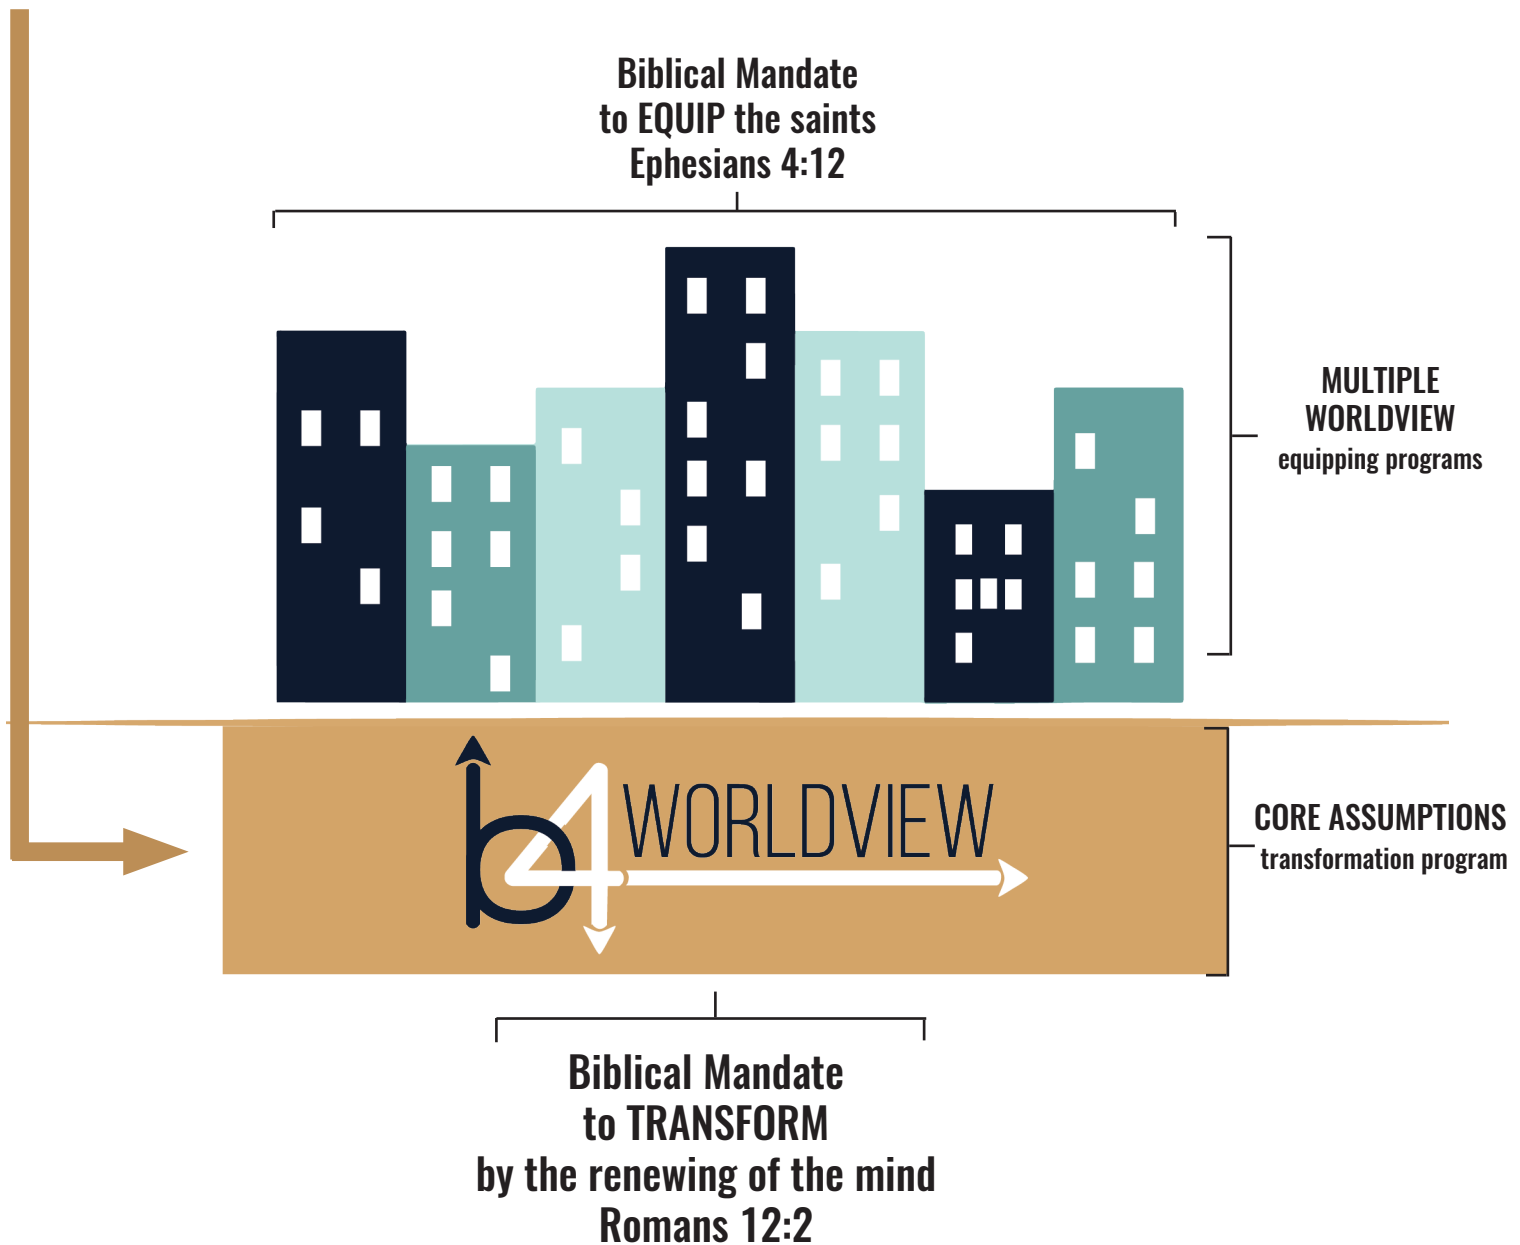

But he has now grown cynical of his faith because he has noticed it hasn't really mattered much in his life. As he looks around he notices his Christian friends were more like all of his other friends than they were different. Maybe Christians were even more judgmental, defensive, emotionally fragile, and less successful than those who didn't care about religion.

The Solution?

to SET THE STAGE for WORLDVIEW EDUCATION

What if we could...

...start at the foundation, the fundamental patterns of thought (the core assumptions or presuppositions, if you will) that influence how we think, feel, and act?

...discover and measure how our patterns of thought align or fail to align with God's design?

...measure it, change it, and measure it again?

...help students see and own the need to change their critical core assumptions that lie beneath their worldview?

...help one another help others actually think biblically and "walk in the spirit"?

We're not talking about...

...memorizing presuppositions.

...predicting what the right answers should be.

...identifying historic philosophical positions.

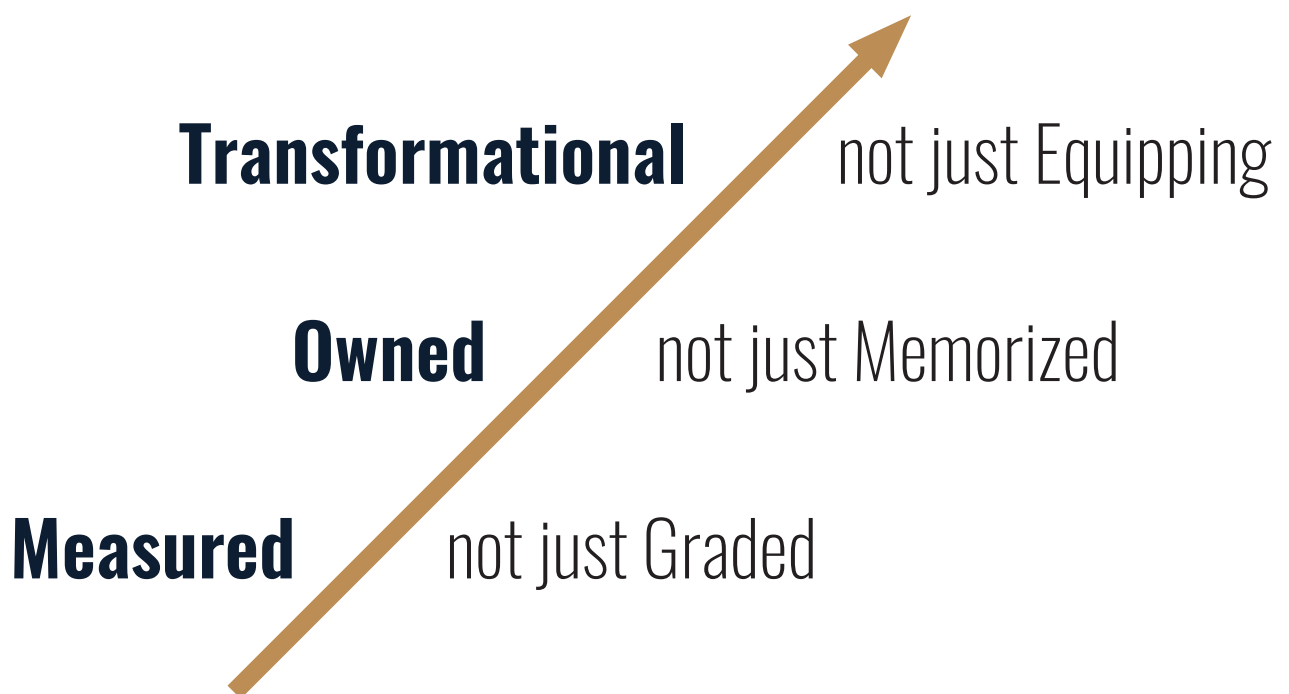

...doing well on tests or getting better grades.

We are talking about...

...being “transformed by the renewing of [our minds]” to “prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God” (Ro 12:2).

...measuring it in such a way that we can help each other improve our biblical mindset.

Our Program is...

MEASURED TRANSFORMATION

Here are examples of just a few of the many confidential reports available to you for your particular student population.

Comparative Analysis Measured Growth

This illustrates the measure of growth that a typical student achieved after taking the b4worldview course.

TRANSFORMATION
that is MEASURED
and OWNED!

PROFILES

Your average b4worldview profile

How do the group's core assumptions align with biblical teaching?

Population Profile

Demographics:*

46 Students
55% female
45% male

Student answers are reported as aligned or misaligned with biblical absolutes.

*For statistical accuracy and for preservation of confidentiality, b4worldview requests at least 30 members in a group before providing these kind of reports.

PERSONALITY ANALYSIS

Insights into how your unique personality impacts your worldview and your faith.

b4worldview Profile: Personality and Truth

Risk tolerance

High

Low

Relative

Absolute

Belief about Truth

b4worldview Profile: Personality and Faith

Reliance on faith

High

Low

Avoid

Approach

“minimize pain”

“maximize pleasure”

Motivational tendency

What does b4Worldview do?

b4worldview is an interactive transformational online learning experience for people at any age—but especially millennials who are facing college. Expert professionals at b4worldview have discovered that although someone becomes a Christian, if they maintain carnal thinking about human nature, truth, and reality, then they will be vulnerable to the “elementary and worthless principles of this world.” Christians and non-Christians alike ultimately think, feel, and act from fundamental patterns of thought, which are called core assumptions. These are basic ideas that influence choices about life and living that are rarely, if ever, questioned or proven.

b4worldview exposes the carnal mind and reveals the mind of Christ. After 10–12 hours of the b4worldview course, a Christian will more fully grasp why God’s truths matter and why the assumptions of this world are futile. After the b4Worldview course, a non-Christian will become very uncomfortable with the worthlessness of the assumptions of this world and be more open to absolute truth and a reliance on faith. b4Worldview provides Christians and non-Christians an investigation of God’s Truth without saying, “because the Bible says so.” b4worldview’s mission is to help believers transform their own core assumptions from carnal to Kingdom core assumptions so that they can engage a dying world in more effective ways and more fully benefit in their own lives from the privileges and provisions of The Kingdom in which they belong. The passion behind b4worldview is for Christians to be the light God has purposed us to be. Maybe even more importantly, b4worldview disturbs the cynical or apathetic foothold both Christians and non-Christians have typically relied on while turning a deaf ear to the Gospel of Grace.

How does b4Worldview do it?

The b4Worldview system is accessible on the internet (in the cloud) by anyone who has a computer, a browser, a high-speed internet connection, and a login. The system can have unlimited users at any time. The entire course has been designed to interact with the student individually. Every student interaction with the system is confidentially recorded. The software constantly measures the student’s core assumptions and relationship with the material. The system leverages artificial intelligence technology to develop a personal relationship between the student and the online learning environment. As the student progresses, the learning experience advances to assist the student in developing biblical thought patterns. The system is updated perpetually to assure that the student experience is always improving. At any time during the course, the student may request reports on assessments and progress. The student can choose to share these confidential reports with others (parents, teachers, counselors, pastors, etc.) who can help the student.

Where is the real value?

b4Worldview captures metrics to help guide each student through the course. This is b4Worldview’s “secret sauce.” For the sponsoring organization, the metrics provide reports. Those reports give you strategic insights into how your actions can collaborate with your student’s transformation. The b4Worldview staff stands ready to share how the statistics provided can highlight opportunities for other supportive forms of intervention you can choose to offer your students.

b4worldview is an attractive and affordable learning solution for...

- ...preparing senior high schoolers (and their parents) in Christian churches for what’s ahead,
- ...helping small groups in Christian churches develop biblical thinking,
- ...assisting counselors in Christian churches, schools, and ministries with identifying core problems with assumptions, and
- ...improving the first year experience for freshman in Christian colleges and universities.

Why would someone want to take the course?

Most students take the b4Worldview course because they are asked to do so. (Normally someone else—a parent, church, school, ministry, or institution—pays for the course.) The course perpetually assesses how your core assumptions align with Kingdom core assumptions. For the Christian or non-Christian who sincerely desires to figure out the best way to think—and don’t we all want to know that?—the course guides us through a customized interactive thought experience. If you want to think more biblically, “to put off the old man,” to more fully experience the provisions and privileges of God’s province, know that you are “a new creation,” and more effectively shine your light before others, b4Worldview can help you. And, as you are willing, b4Worldview can help others help you.

cultural transformation

Want to know more?

visit b4worldview.com